

Vale (www.vale.com) is the second-largest metals and mining company in the world and the largest in the Americas, based on market capitalization. We are the world's largest producer of iron ore and iron ore pellets and the world's second-largest producer of nickel. We are one of the world's largest producers of manganese ore, ferroalloys and kaolin. We also produce bauxite, alumina, aluminum, copper, coal, potash, cobalt, platinum group metals ("PGMs") and other products. To support our growth strategy, we are actively engaged in mineral exploration efforts in 22 countries around the globe. We operate large logistics systems in Latin America, including railroads, maritime terminals and a port, which are integrated with our mining operations. In addition, we own a fleet of large vessels to transport iron ore. Directly and through affiliates and joint ventures, we have investments in the energy and steel businesses.

Vale is a global company, with a workforce of over 100,000 employees, including outsourced workers. We operate on five continents through our mining operations, mineral surveying and commercial offices.
